This extended-release opioid, whose generic name is oxymorphone hydrochloride, delivers steady, around-the-clock management of moderate to severe pain, transforming daily life for those needing continuous support.

What Makes Opana ER Powerful

Opana ER stands out for its potent formula, providing up to 12 hours of consistent relief from persistent pain conditions like chronic back pain, osteoarthritis, or cancer-related discomfort. Unlike short-acting options, its extended-release design minimizes peaks and troughs, helping patients maintain focus, mobility, and quality of life without constant redosing. Patients in clinical studies reported significant improvements in daily activities, sleep, and mood, with many rating it as excellent after extended use.

Key Uses and Benefits

Oxymorphone hydrochloride targets pain severe enough to require opioid therapy when other treatments fall short, making it ideal for long-term management rather than acute or as-needed scenarios.

- Relieves moderate-to-severe chronic pain in opioid-tolerant adults.
- Supports around-the-clock control for conditions like neuropathic pain or post-surgical recovery (when ongoing).
- Enhances function, with studies showing better walking ability, work performance, and enjoyment of life.

Related terms like extended-release opioid, chronic pain management, oxymorphone tablets, and pain relief medication highlight its role in comprehensive care plans.

Dosage and Safe Use Guidance

Last Updated: 28 Feb 2026

Start low in opioid-naïve patients—often 5mg every 12 hours—titrating under medical supervision to balance efficacy and tolerability. For renal impairment (creatinine clearance <50 mL/min), even lower initial doses apply, with close monitoring for side effects like drowsiness or breathing changes. Always pair with rescue meds for breakthrough pain, avoid alcohol, and follow DEA Schedule II rules for refills.

Dosage Strength	Typical Use Case	Key Consideration
5 mg	Opioid-naïve starters	Lowest effective dose
10-20 mg	Moderate chronic pain	Titrate based on response
40 mg	Severe, ongoing needs	Experienced patients only
